FAQS
FOR CATERINGS

What is the difference between private / prepaid catering and an event where guests pay their own way?

There are two main types of food truck events. The most common type of event is a private event. Private events are arranged ahead of time with a set menu and quantity of food from which guests can choose. Examples of private events are company parties, weddings, etc. Everything is paid in advance.

- Another common event scenario is when a budget is not allocated to pay for all event attendees and instead the host or organizer agrees to guarantee a vendor's food minimum, commonly referred to as a guaranteed minimum. Examples of an event that may use a guaranteed minimum is a street festival.

In both type of food truck events, rental fees may apply.

What does the price next to each bar include?
